ABSTRACT

The masks hoarding is one of the serious problems experienced by Indonesia during the Covid-19 pandemic. Considering that masks today are not only a need for specific individuals and groups but a need for everyone around the world. As a result of this action, the supply of masks on the market has become scarce, and the price has jumped sharply, which is very detrimental to the community. The problem arises regarding the factors causing the masks hoarding during the Covid-19 pandemic and the criminal law enforcement against masks hoarding during the Covid-19 pandemic as an effort to overcome mask hoarding during the Covid-19 pandemic. In the discussion of this article, the method used is the normative juridical research method. Various factors cause masks hoarding, such as internal and external factors, to become the motive for mask hoarding perpetrators. The act of hoarding masks is undoubtedly contrary to Law No.7 of 2014 concerning Trade, which states that business actors are prohibited from hoarding goods related to basic and essential goods. However, the criminal provisions in Law No.7 of 2014 concerning Trade can be applied if masks are designated as crucial items. But in this case of hoarding, it is not only related to trade laws, but can also be related to criminal acts of corruption and sabotage. The ultimate goal of the criminal law policy against masks hoarding is none other than the realization of protection for the public to get personal protective equipment in the form of masks at normal prices on the market.
