Abstract

Bullying is a dangerous negative behavior. Through this let's speak up campaign, PT Yupi Indo Jelly Gum invites young people to spread positive attitudes to others. This study aims to measure the effect of the let's speak up video campaign on prevent bullying behavior. The population in this study were students of class VII and VIII of SMP Negeri 48 South Jakarta with a total of 575 people. Through purposive sampling technique, only 85 respondents were simplified using the Slovin formula. The theory used in this research is the theory of persuasion which in the theory of persuasion is a theory of planned behavior. In this study the let's speak up video campaign was measured based on two (2) dimensions, namely the dimensions of the message content and the message structure. Prevent bullying behavior is also measured based on three (3) dimensions, namely cognitive, affective and psychomotor aspects. Regression test results are 0.479 which means that every one-time addition to let's speak up video campaign, the prevent bullying behavior increases by 0.479. Conversely, if the negative let's speak up video campaign decreases by 0.479. The results of the hypothesis t count ($7.837 > t \text{ table } (1.989)$) then H_0 is rejected and H_a is accepted (magnitude of influence).
