ABSTRACT

Based on the National Survey by the National Counter Terrorism Agency (BNPT) on Resilience and the Potential for Radicalism, it is recorded that 5 regions/provinces, namely Bengkulu, Gorontalo, South Sulawesi, Lampung, and North Kalimantan, have a relatively high potential for exposure to radical ideology. Furthermore, according to The Global Terrorism Index 2017-2022, Indonesia is regarded as the second-highest country with a declining security level in the Asia-Pacific region. Responding to the development of violent extremism within the Indonesian society, on the 6th January 2021, the President of the Republic of Indonesia declared Presidential Regulation Number 7 of 2021 on the National Action Plan for the Prevention and Handling of Violence-Based Extremism Leading to Terrorism (RAN PE) 2020-2024, which supports the involvement of Regional Governments and Civil Society as direct victims through the implementation of a whole-of-government and whole-of-society approach, as well as providing an opportunity for third parties to promote the implementation of RAN PE. In this research, the author will attempt to explain the support provided by the Australia-Indonesia Partnership for Justice (AIPJ2) as a third party to RAN PE in the regions of the Republic of Indonesia. This study is a qualitative research study using a descriptive research method, with research data collected through interviews with sources from AIPJ2 and CSOs, as well as official reports from various credible sources. The final results of the research indicate that AIPJ2 has supported various efforts to implement RAN PE in the regions through the provision of donor funding and experts as a means of improving the results of programs related to the implementation of RAN PE in the regions, which are formulated by Regional Governments and Civil Society Organizations (CSOs). The results of AIPJ2's support for the Local Action Plan (LAP) include Provincial Regulations on LAP for PCVE, official document, short course, partnership forum, and the implementation of activities/programs related to the LAP for PCVE.
