Abstract

Along with advancements in modern investment, various alternative instruments beyond the capital market have emerged, including Cryptocurrency, precious metals such as gold, exchange rates, and interest rate-based financial instruments. These external factors are considered to have significant potential in influencing stock price dynamics, especially in the banking sector, which is known to be highly sensitive to macroeconomic changes. This study aims to analyze the influence of external factors consisting of Cryptocurrency, exchange rates, and interest rates on the stock prices of conventional banks listed on the Indonesia Stock Exchange (IDX) for the 2021–2024 period. A quantitative approach with panel data regression was applied. The data analyzed is cross-sectional and time series, sourced from the IDX, Bank Indonesia, and other verified financial platforms. The sample consists of 43 banking companies. The results show that Cryptocurrency does not affect bank stock prices (t -statistic $1.181 < t$ -table 1.974) and exchange rates also have no effect (t -statistic $0.176 < t$ -table 1.974). Meanwhile, interest rates have a negative effect on bank stock prices (t -statistic $2.358 > t$ -table 1.974).
