Abstract

This study was conducted to find out the effect of organizational culture, leadership style and organizational commitment on the employee work-effectiveness. The research approach is quantitative and the analysis method used is multiple regression analysis. The research was conducted at STIMar “AMI” Jakarta using survey with the saturated samples of 46 employees. The research findings show: (1) organizational culture has positively and significantly affected the employee work-effectiveness; (2) leadership style has positively and significantly affected the employee work-effectiveness; (3) organizational commitment has positively and significantly affected the employee work-effectiveness. Based on these findings, it can be concluded that enhancing the employee work-effectiveness can be done through strengthening organizational culture, leadership style and organizational commitment. It was also obtained that organizational commitment were not significantly influenced by organizational culture and leadership style, which implied that the direct effect of organizational culture and leadership style on the organizational commitment was not supported by empirical data in this research.
