ABSTRAK

ABSTRACT

This study aims to examine how alliance and terrorism attacks affect the military assistance provided by the United States. In addition, this study also examines two countries, namely Afghanistan and Pakistan as a case study. The results showed that these two variables only had an effect of 20.08% on military assistance provided.
There are several other factors such as threats, national security, common vision between the donor and recipient countries, the political dynamics of the recipient country and the dynamics of US relations with its allies. In this study, the authors used a mixed type of research, namely a quantitative approach to test alliance variables, terrorism attacks and military assistance and qualitative approaches to deepen these variables with the case study method.
